BEST MAGAZINE ARTICLE—FIRST QUARTER 1950

Members of the Randall family, through the medium of the New York Times, seem to have almost monopolized the honors for contributing each year during the first three months, the best Lincoln magazine article. This year Mrs. Ruth Painter Randall's essay on "Mrs. Lincoln Revealed in a New Light" appearing in the New York Times Magazine was given first honors by the Lincoln Foundation Advisory Group. Mrs. Randall's husband, James G. Randall, for the two years previous was given first honors for monographs appearing in the same publication.

Mrs. Randall's painstaking analysis of the references to Mrs. Lincoln in the generally accepted Herndon manuscripts and the repudiation of many of them clears the way for a better understanding of Abraham Lincoln's home life. She presents a historical Mrs. Lincoln who contributed much to her husband's advancement and was well qualified to fill the position of first lady of the land.

The list of magazine articles which follow, all dealing with some episode in the Lincoln story, appeared during the first quarter of 1950.
